Britain Hears Menace in Boom of Wilson Words

London Astonished That President's Insistence on a "Diplomatic Victory" Should Result in Virtual Line-up with Germany Against the Entente.

By J. L. GARVIN.

[Copyright 1916-The Tribune Ass'n.] [By Cable to The Tribune.]

London, Feb. 5 .- We do not fully understand the Anglo-American situation, greatly as we desire to understand it. President Wilson's peeches reverberate across the Atlantic like the dull thudding of distant runs or the "ancestral voices prophesying war" that Kubla Khan heard from afar in the Gardens at Xanadu. At the same time we find ourselves urged by cable to realize that the sound is ominous, not for Ger many, but for ourselves. We are bidden to awake from the delusions we are supposed to cherish on the subject of American sympathy with the Allies. That sympathy, we are told, is, in a way, as real as the living sentiment of thankfulness and encouragement it has certainly excited in us.

Nevertheless, we are warned that the Eastern States and a minority elsewhere are only the part which we have been misled into thinking is greater than the whole. In the warmth of our feeling toward our friends among you, friends whom we shall never doubt or forget, whatever happens, we had not thought of Euclid in this connection. When American hands seemed to be stretched across the sea we stretched ours without counting or distinguishing too nicely or reminding ourselves that these were private demonstrations which might officially be disavowed. New admonitions contained the hint that if we had been more rapidly successful in coping with the German war, German preparation for war and German despotism, nothing would have succeeded like success, and Anglo-American matters would all be different. This, however, serves way, only to increase our perplexity.

Berlin Makes Virtue of Necessity

Our cheerful instructors also tell, even where we have scored a cinct which covers any portion of the trilliant success, as in our campaign against German submarines, of its turning by its contradictions to our prejudice. Had the famous Tirpitzian plan of sea frightfulness prospered the German would have con- told them to send patrolmen to cover tinued to sink and murder British and neutral vessels and crews, right and left, while snapping his fingers at the protests of Washington. GERMANS KILL CHIVALRY SAYS LONDON'S BISHOF

London, Feb. 6. - The Bishop of London, the Right Rev. Arthur Winnington Ingram, speaking at Stoke Newington last night, said:

"One of the saddest men in England must be the skipper of the trawler which came upon the sinking Zeppelin in the North Sea. The skipper would have liked to rescue the men, though they were enemies, but was unable to trust the Germans' word. Had he taken the Germans on his ship they might have attacked the crew, and the whole German press would have applauded the action as a clever piece of strategy.

"Therefore, we ought to stand by the skipper. The Germans have killed chivalry in warfare."

Berlin Admits Neutrals Should Have Been Spared.

LANSING SENDS NOTE TO WILSON

Secretary Says He May Make Announcement Soon -Tension Lessens.

[From the Tribune Bureau] Washington, Feb. 5.—"No change" was the report of the State Department to-day on the Lusitania case. While this might be taken as an indication that the "grave, but not dangerous," crisis still prevails, there was a marked tendency among officials to-day to regard the situation as less serious than they believed it to be a week ago.

Whether an admission of liability is a confession of guilt is the question that Secretary Lansing and President Wilson will debate Moncorporate in the tentative draft of the Lusitania agreement, the Berlin Foreign Office has substituted a When Senator Thompson learned Mr. phrase which certain high authorisider covers all the principles in-"Will you please notify me wireless volved in the question of submarine
